

MARK A. SPRINGFIELD, J.D. is a Board Certified Specialist in Family Law with a law practice focused primarily on representing clients in the collaborative law process. Prior to 2005, Mark was a general litigation attorney with extensive experience in state and federal courts, having tried cases ranging from criminal matters and personal injury in state court to working with teams of lawyers to litigate massive securities fraud and antitrust cases. As of 2005, Mark decided to restrict his law practice to helping clients reach divorce settlements outside of the courtroom and the adversarial litigation process. In 2010, Mark founded Springfield Collaborative Divorce, a law firm focused exclusively on providing collaborative law and non-adversarial conflict resolution services. Mark's firm has successfully completed hundreds of collaborative cases. Mark is a frequent trainer and lecturer on the collaborative law process.

Mark was co-founder of Separating Together collaborative practice group in 2003. He is past president and currently a member of Collaborative Divorce Experts collaborative practice group. Mark is Vice President of the North Carolina Civil Collaborative Law Association and is on the board of the North Carolina Collaborative Attorney Network. Mark received his undergraduate degree from Wake Forest University in 1981 and his law degree cum laude from The University of Georgia in 1984. In law school, he served on the editorial board of the Georgia Law Review. From 1984 to 1986, Mark had a federal clerkship with the Honorable Harold L. Murphy, U.S. District Court Judge for the Northern District of Georgia. In 2010, Mark successfully completed the requirements for designation as a CFP® (Certified Financial Planner™).

Mark is the co-author of "What is Collaborative Law" published in the Winter, 2016 issue of the North Carolina State Bar Journal.
